An Even Shape

Her garden looks in through my window
Criss-crossed by the white lattice.
Coolers they call them but they are also Hiding places for small girls playing

- 5 Her garden stands neatly round her house
Travels politely unto the verandah
To sit in pots or hang Leafily down from large, earth-coloured urns
- 10 She lives with Mama, shepherding her with her full body
The hesitant ins and outs of Mama's half-blind days
Feeding her frail consciousness with edited
- 15 Gleaner news
And homemade chicken soup.

- In her home, borrowed children touched her
china birds with hands
Wiped clean from eating sticky cakes, each
- 20 with a cherry on top
Or press moist, breathless kisses round
The corners of her smile.

- Sometimes she fills the space out
With music. Spreading out nostalgia through
- 25 Strings and flutes, old fashioned love songs
Of blue moons and forever until.

- Shameful peeping Tom, I sit silent in My lattice watching the even shape of her days
- 30 To catch, just once, a wider open door
behind
Her steady eyes.

- But in her green edged privacy, self-contained
- 35 She keeps the half-drawn shutters of her life
Open just so, and mocks my greed and restlessness
With a calm refusal to be other than she seems.

Items 34–41

Instructions: Read the following extract carefully and then answer Items 34–41 on the basis of what is stated or implied.

She had always been a small woman – short, light-boned, delicately structured – but now, under the white hospital sheet, she was becoming tiny. I thought of a doll with huge, fierce eyes. There had always been a fierceness in her. It showed in that angry, challenging thrust of the chin when she issued an opinion, and a great one she had always been for issuing 5 opinions.

“I tell people exactly what’s on my mind,” she had been fond of boasting. “I tell them what I think, whether they like it or not.” Often they had not liked it. She could be sarcastic to people in whom she detected evidence of the ignoramus or the fool.

“It’s not always a good policy to tell people exactly what’s on your mind,” I used to 10 caution her.

“If they don’t like it, that’s too bad,” was her customary reply, “because that’s the way I am.”

And so she was. A formidable woman. Determined to speak her mind, determined to bend those who opposed her. In that time when I had known her best, my mother had 15 hurled herself at life with chin thrust forward, eyes blazing, and an energy that made her seem always on the run.

She ran after squawking chickens, a knife in her hand, determined on the beheading that would put dinner in the pot. She ran when she made the beds, ran when she set the table. One Thanksgiving she burned herself badly when, running up from the cellar oven with the ceremonial turkey, she tripped on the stairs and tumbled back down ending on the bottom 20 in the debris of giblets, hot gravy, and battered turkey. Life was combat, and victory was not for the lazy, the timid, the slugabed, the drugstore cowboy, the mushmouth afraid to tell people exactly what was on their mind whether people liked it or not. She ran.

But now her running was over.

Items 42–46

Instructions: Read the following extract carefully and then answer Items 42–46 on the basis of what is stated or implied.

More than a quarter century ago, we were forced to wrestle with the thorny issue of casinos and the supposed ills and benefits which flow from them. In the end, a sensible solution emerged: allow some to remain while controlling their growth. Interestingly, we may argue about casinos, but we have given the green light to arcades where people gamble — day and night.

- 5 Some Caribbean governments have seemingly opened the door to yet another round of possible emotional debate with the decision to allow cruise ships lying at anchor to operate their casinos in their waters. Is this move a prelude to opening casinos on land?

- 10 Supporters of casino gambling have always said that casinos can and do function in a country without the moral decay that is routinely associated with them. Like most things, the pros and the cons about casino gambling are grossly exaggerated.

- 15 Those who favour them argue that casinos on land should be seen as another attraction that can be added to the country's tourism industry, if prudent controls are imposed. For example, The Bahamas, Antigua, Suriname and Sint Maarten are a few places where casino gambling is allowed and tourism authorities in those places have said that casino gambling has proven to be a stimulus to their tourism sector, without the moral decay that is routinely associated with casinos.

- 20 Opponents, on the other hand, insist that casinos lead to gambling addiction, crime, and, worse, a debasement of society. With everything else that is happening in our islands — an upsurge of gangs, drugs and violent behaviour among our youth — that is the last thing that we may need right now. However, the case of the cruise ships keeping casinos open while docked on shore may cause little if any harm to the country and its people since few locals will have access to them.

- Let's face it, Caribbean people gamble at bingo to raise money for churches; they flock to the tracks to watch horses run and bet millions annually on the outcome of the races. Many play lotto daily and the English football pools weekly.

- 25 So if, as some are saying, this move of allowing gambling on cruise ships in port may be the first step to casinos on land, then we will not be totally surprised.

So let the debates begin.

This is an open request to try to find who is the 'brain' behind traffic management in Paolo. Does anybody know? I have tried Traffic Branch, not them; Highways, not them; Planning & Development, not them; in fact nobody wants to take responsibility for certain decisions and the mess that results.

- 5 For example, Mission Road was made one-way, north to south. Great idea! It worked, no traffic jams. In fact, many people were charged for going the wrong way up a one-way street. Then suddenly it's back to two-way and traffic for so! Same is true of Stoke Street. Somebody changed the 'Stop' signs at the corner for a few weeks, then they changed it back; nobody knows why.

- 10 But the best is Celestial Road in St John which is 'Wrecker Heaven'. Somebody made this road, which, apart from Broadway, is the widest street in Paolo, a 'no parking' street, either side, any time, and the 'Wrecker' is profiting from this.

There are four major office buildings on this road, all of which provide underground parking for staff, so some (usually the lower paid) have to park elsewhere and these are the persons whose cars the wrecker is taking away all day, everyday. Again the small man suffers!

- 15 Oh! there is an exception: if you have a Canadian High Commission sticker you can park and the wrecker will not touch your 'Diplomatic' car. Maybe we could all become Diplomats!

Then again, the two narrowest streets in Paolo allow parking; try Delino Street off Abby Lane, you can hardly pass!

- 20 Who is the 'brain' behind this mess? It seems the more cars we put on the road, the less parking somebody wants to allow. Who is this brain? No doubt a small man with a BIG, BIG car who has no name!
